STANFORD FEMALE COLLEGE.

Closing Exercises.

Thirteen years ago, Rev. W. C. Trueheart, of Virginia, the husband of Mrs. Sallie C. Trueheart, was elected principal of Stanford Female College. The institution was then in its infancy, poorly patronized and hardly known outside of its immediate section. Almost before the close of the first year Mr. Trueheart yielded to that dread illness, consumption and died. Mrs. Trueheart returned to Virginia and while there received an invitation from trustees of the College, without solicitation on her part, to return and take charge of the school. She accepted and resolved to give the undivided effort to the building up of a school first class in every particular. Her fine administrative ability was brought into its fullest play and gathering around her a competent faculty, she soon placed the institution on a firm footing, giving it a reputation at home and abroad which attracted pupils from nearly all of the Southern States. For twelve years she has labored among us and while building up an institution of learning second to none of its kind in the State, has elevated the morals of our town, assisted in its growth and in every respect has been a blessing to the community which has learned to respect, honor and love her. In this state of case it is but natural that her decision to sever her connection with the College should be received with general regret and sorrow. It will be difficult, if indeed, it is not almost impossible, to fill her place with one so thoroughly fitted to conduct such a school. The community feels this and while it extends to Mrs. Trueheart its highest expressions of appreciation and good wishes for her success and welfare in her new position as principal of the Millersburg Female College, which she has decided it is her interest to accept, it feels a natural solicitude for the future of the school, she has built up and fostered. No greater compliment could be paid her than the universal wish that it will maintain the high character she has given it.

THE COMMENCEMENT.

The closing exercises of the year and of Mrs. Trueheart's administration occurred at the Opera House, Tuesday night. Nature itself seemed to smile upon the occasion, for the evening was a most lovely one, and everything combined to make it pleasant to the spectators and a memorable dedication to the principal and teachers.

The building was packed to the walls and the scene of beauty presented was rarely excelled. Lovely women clad in beautiful attire, their happy faces framed in the wondrous results of the milliner's art and their dresses and ribbons rivaling in beauty and shades the colors of the rainbow, made up a picture that challenged the admiration of every beholder. Shortly before 8 o'clock, the school girls all arrayed in spotless white presenting the incarnation of youthful beauty and purity, escorted by Mrs. Trueheart and her family, and proceeded by the Gold & Silver Band, which played "Penelope March," marched in double file to the Opera House and to seats upon the stage. The band gave another selection and after prayer by Eld. John Bell Gibson, Miss Mary Reid, of Lincoln county, the pretty and lovable little "salutatorian," was introduced. Miss Reid was beautifully attired in an elegant Otonian robe, white chrysal front and passment-ware trimmings on the square neck bodice, and in a sweetly modulated voice, read the following oration:

Miss Mailie White's sweet, girlish beauty was enhanced by a toilet of white Nun's veiling garnished with rich lace and white ribbons, and she looked as bright and fresh as a lily of the valley of her own native State, Virginia. "Near the Sunet" was the subject of her essay and it was effectively read as it was excellent in composition. She too had reason to be proud of her floral offering.

Mr. S. S. Myers, brother of the principal, then read the

be most widely known, especially in the city where the greatest crowds gather. Let us follow one down the grand avenue. As the doublets along all pedestals stand aside or give the entire sidewalk, and some recline in awe-struck voices—"What is it?" but who can give answer? Does he belong to the animal kingdom? Is he the lost link or a specimen of the coming man?" Consider it, whether a man or a monkey, he is gaudily arrayed. The brocades and linens are of the latest fashion, the hair, cane and shoes of the rarest patterns and of extreme polish. Yet, the setting is rare and showy enough, but what of the jewel within? It is a false representation of man, an imitation which would have seemed strange to Fielding, absurd to Scott, impossible to Thackeray and George Elliot would have denied that such a man belonged to the same race as Adam Bede. It is not surprising that some people believe in triple ancestry, monkey progenitors. As we stand silent and watch that abundance of man vanish, we are not so sure. Darwin's evolution is a fantastic dream of the imagination. But, my schoolmates, while we may look upon such a specimen of humanity, possibly meet him in society, with such we do not wish to become intimate. With sensible, loving mothers and fathers, teachers and friends, whose efforts in our behalf have been unceasing, we trust to ultimately the genuine, asimitus only the good and beautiful. We may pass through fiery ordeals, tot the pure gold, may the fire brighten and purify but never destroy. We wish these blessings for ourselves, and doubt, kind audience, that you echo the wish as we again say "Amen."

Loud applause greeted the fair salutatorian and when she took her seat, she was nearly hid from sight by the pyramid of beautiful flowers, which admiring friends presented her and which contrasted with her own loveliness.

There was more music and then Miss Ida Prewite, of Boyle, was presented. Her dress was of white muslin, trimmed handsomely in Swiss embroidery and white with ribbons and she never looked more lovely as she read in a most charming manner a very creditable essay, entitled "Million's Eve." She was also the recipient of many handsome floral offerings.

Miss Eliza Owsley, of Stanford, was next introduced. She was becomingly attired in a combination of Oriental lace and white muslin silk, which set off her own natural charms of person and made her a very interesting picture. Her essay on "Mysteries" was a very ingenious production and she read it with much eloquence and effect. Many bouquets rewarded her effort.

Miss Mailie White's sweet, girlish beauty was enhanced by a toilet of white Nun's veiling garnished with rich lace and white ribbons, and she looked as bright and fresh as a lily of the valley of her own native State, Virginia. "Near the Sunet" was the subject of her essay and it was effectively read as it was excellent in composition. She too had reason to be proud of her floral offering.

Mr. S. S. Myers, brother of the principal, then read the FULL DIPLOMAS.

Miss Madie White was awarded a Full Diploma with the degree of M. E. L. The principal says of her: "Miss White has been a member of the College family for six years. She will return to her home in Virginia, followed by the love and well wishes of many besides her schoolmates and teachers."

Miss Eliza Owsley received a Full Diploma with the degree of M. E. L. and the following compliment: "Miss Owsley has for ten years been a pupil in Stanford Female College and in all these years her schoolmates have found her gentle and kind, and her teachers can testify to her invariable diligence and perseverance. She has won the election of all, and carries with her the promise of success in all her future undertakings."

The highest degree of the College, that of A. B., was conferred on Miss Mary Reid, of whom the principal says: "She has won for herself besides a Full Diploma, the special honor of Salutatorian. She has known no other school than Stanford Female College and goes out followed by the commendation of her teachers as well as the kind wishes and affection of her schoolmates."

Miss Jennie Crane also received the degree of A. B. and these words of praise: "Besides the highest honors the College can confer, Miss Crane has won the highest special honor as valedictorian. From her entrance in the College, six years ago, to the present, she has had a high place in recitation, has been diligent and successful. Her teachers commend her heartily and with her schoolmates wish her well, and love her much. As a daughter of the Old Dominion, she will return to her native State, followed by the respect and affection of all who know her."

Rev. F. S. Pollitt here came forward and delivered an address to the graduating class which was highly complimented on all sides.

One of the most pleasing features of the programme was a solo by Miss Georgia Eldridge. She chose "The Flower Girl," which she rendered so sweetly and delightfully that the enraptured audience would hear no refusal to respond to its encore, and good naturedly she again appeared and sang with thrilling effect, that sweetest of Scotch ballads "Annie Laurie."

At the conclusion of the valedictory,

Mrs. Trueheart arose and in a touching manner expressed her heartfelt regrets at leaving a community which had given her so many evidences of its esteem and good will by a long and continued support. She tried to say "Goodbye" but choking with emotion, she was compelled to resume her seat. The action spoke more than words could express and a murmur of genuine sorrow at her decision ran through the audience. The sweet strains of "Old Kentucky Home" then fell softly on the bushy and well-filled audience, the benediction was spoken by Rev. Cadeson Pops and the sixteenth session of Stanford Female College was ended.

MT. SALEM, LINCOLN COUNTY.

—Mr. James C. Williams lately sold to John W. Wilcher 1,025 acres of fine bank and timber land on the Dry Ridge in Clay County.

—Emmett McCormack gathered up a car load of lumber in this vicinity on Monday, average weight 80 lbs, at 5¢ per lb. G. W. Camden sold to Cole Dunn 5 calves for $7.50.

—Married recently in Middleburg by the Rev. A. C. Tabor, Mr. George W. Ross, a widower of long standing and extensive experience, being on the sunny side of 50, to Miss Bertie T. Foley, a maiden of some 18 summers and daughter of Hiram Foley Esq.

—On a several days trip to Casey county we found everything bright and promising. Middleburg and Yessentek seem to be doing a brisk business. Fruit prospects are charming, especially apples and blackberries. Peaches, too, promise a good yield.

Died near Mt. Olive, Casey county, on the 30th ult., of consumption, Mrs. Sallie J. Elliott, wife of David Elliott, aged about 50 years. Mrs. Elliott was a good woman and highly respected by all who knew her, and leaves 4 children to lament her loss.

Judge J. Boyle Stone is the democrat candidate to represent Casey and Russell in the lower branch of the next Legislature. The opposition is urging Mr. Morris C. Key to take the track against him, but at this writing he has not fully decided. As both are popular, canvassing is expected to be spirited and the far may yet fly.

—The heavy rain of last Saturday caused a considerable rise in Green River and several of its western tributary creeks overflowed their banks and did much damage to fencing. Corn crops and meadows on the lower bottoms were injured in spite, but I don't think the damage is serious. There has been so much wet weather lately that some crops are getting very weedy.

—A short time since two broom peddlers met Mrs. Elizabeth Tinley near her home and sold her two brooms, receiving the money. As she was going from home they proposed to save her trouble by delivering them at her house which they failed to do. It was a small matter and the widow may survive the loss, but it displayed more dishonesty than sharpness in the transaction. As they are known it might be advisable to send her the money or brooms as it might injure a prosperous broom manufacturer or mortify the feelings of respectable relatives.

—R. M. Reynolds, late First Auditor of the United States Treasury, killed himself at the Southern Hotel, St. Louis.

—TRY IT YOURSELF.

The proof of the pudding is not in chewing the string, but in having an opportunity to try the article yourself. McRoberts & Stagg, the Druggists, have a free trial bottle of Dr. Rosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for each and every one who is affected with Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption or any Lung Ailment.

W. P. WALTON.

The substantial business men of Louisville repudiate the charge made by Mayor Reed that they have asked him to permit the gamblers to resume their operations and some forty odd called on him Tuesday to demand the names of those who had made such a request and to urge upon him to enforce the law against those enemies of society. The mayor refused to divulge the names, but promised that he would do all in his power to prevent gambling in the future. It is said that the spasmodic effort to suppress it lasted less than a week and that now the keno goose squeaks as largely and as loudly as in days of yore. These dena are a disgrace to the city and it is a shame that they are allowed to openly defy the law.

It is telegraphed from Washington that Col. E. Polk Johnson, of the Louisville Times, had a pleasant interview with the President, which lasted according to a green-eyed Post-correspondent 25 minutes and three seconds. The Col. was not in quest of office, but only called to pay his respects and invite Mr. C. to Louisville. The successful visit of Mr. W. W. Watterson to the White House, followed by the happy reception of another of the enemy, will no doubt cause the envious Snoots to rear up in his hind legs and howl. If this thing keeps up "Me and Randall" will be forwarded if received.

GARRARD COUNTY DEPARTMENT.

Lancaster.

The Burnside Bros. will plant 80 acres of tobacco this season. About 50 acres have already been planted.

—Dr. Morris J. Evans, of Millersburg, was elected President of the Garrard Female College Wednesday, and will take charge in September.

—Dr. Tracy's Temperance meetings continue to draw large audiences at the Court-house each evening. Tuesday night 125 persons signed the pledge and donned the blue ribbon.

—A troop of wandering Arabs with three performing bears came into town Wednesday evening but were ordered out by the authorities before they had "done" the town to their own satisfaction.

—Kitty Gill, colored, did it with her little hatchet in the police court Tuesday when she was sent to the work-house for 70 days for stealing one from another cook. Kitty is an old offender and don't feel at home outside the work-house walls.

—The extensive preparation for the Hop Thursday night indicated it would be an elegant affair. After the Party Wednesday evening the young folks went to Old Fellow's Hall and participated in an impromptu hop, of some four hours' duration.

—While Capt. Dillon's fast mail line was coming into town Wednesday afternoon, full up with a load of drummers, &c., the rear axle of his wagon broke, causing some consternation among the passengers but unfortunately none of the drummers were hurt.

—The news of the appointment of Col. T. C. Bronston, of Richmond, to be Collector of this district, which shows that Congressman McCressey is pretty solid with the administration. While we preferred one or two of the other applicants to Col. Bronston, the appointment is a good one and will give probably as much general satisfaction as any that could have been made. Of course the office of the Collector will now be removed to Richmond.

NOTES OF CURRENT EVENTS.

—A. C. Rees has been appointed postmaster at Mayville.

—Z. F. Smith, a well-known lawyer of Louisville, died at Eminence Tuesday.

—John C. Gault has been appointed General Manager of the Queen & Crescent R. R.

—The teller of the Bank of the Manhattan Co., New York, is a defaulter to the amount of $160,610.

—A violent wind and thunder-storm visited Chicago Tuesday. Several lives were lost and considerable property damaged.

—A Virginia lawman about a fifty-cent dog cost one party $200 and the other $125, and resulted in one murder and a case of arson.

—An examination into the condition of the collapsed Shackamaxon Bank, Philadelphia, shows a shortage of a half million dollars.

—Miss Julia Jackson, daughter of the late Stonewall Jackson, was married Wednesday evening to Mr. Wm. E. Christian, Richmond.

—The determination of the Blaine partisans to defeat Senator Edmunds in the Vermont legislature of 1886 has already begun to take shape.

—R. S. Triplett has received the democratic nomination for State Senator in the Owenboro district and D. H. Smith in the Thirteenth district.

—The Northern Presbyterian General Assembly, which has been in session in Cincinnati, has adjourned to meet next year at Minneapolis, Minn.

—The President has appointed Wm. H. Welsh, of Mayville, to be Deputy Third Auditor of the Treasury, vice A. M. Gardner, of Ohio, resigned by request.

—Williamson, who performed the ceremony in the mock marriage between the married man, Morgan, and a young ignorant girl, Miss Woodson, at Frankfort, was held under $500 bond.

HUNTSVILLE, LINCOLN COUNTY.

—Glad to see the graceful suggestion from Danville as to making our Dr. Brown presiding officer at the State Medical Association to convene at Crab Orchard. This is the first time our good old country—our mother of countries—has been honored by a convocation of the Medicines of the state, and it would be eminently fit to place our veteran doctor in the honorable position of chairman. We do not by any means present Dr. Brown as one of our antiquities, but being possessed of a dignity and discretion beyond his years, a success-

ALWAYS PRAISING THE LORD.

NOTES ON LUKE 13, 6-10.—1. Satan is a seeker of fruit as well as God. Failure to bring forth in season is that sin of omission, that he is as keen to notice as the sin of commission. For either, by the everlasting law of retribution, casts unhappy souls into his power. And he is ever like the covetous man collecting his revenues without mercy, going about with prying glance where vine and fig tree grow together, on his secured ground; and yet where (wonderful to relate) the care of the vine dresser brings forth the most wonderful crops, despite the curse upon the soil (Gen. 3 and 4 chapters.)

Note—the vineyard is the devil's. The vines and fig trees are planted in "his vineyard." "The field is the world" and the "whole world lieth in the wicked one."

Note also the indefinite form of expression "had a figtree planted—not 'he planted,' but some how or other it was planted."

So the force of the Greek as also the Hindostani version come before me. The dear LORD plants. Compare Isaiah V:7, but beware lest the "letter" should "kill."

In connection with this let me mention that no where except in the volcanic soil around Vesuvius have I ever seen fig trees and vines growing closely planted together.

Such proximity would be fatal in the colder soil of England or America. But right there, where satan's seat is; under the grim shadow of the "destruction" that wasted poor Pompeii at "noonday," the Lord makes the utmost fruitfulness to abound, as no where else on earth. Surely around Naples, "out of the eater he brings forth meat!" Newbery told us that 10 crops per annum are raised of the smaller vegetables on the self-same soil. This is simply incredible to those who have not witnessed the amazing fertility of this loose volcanic earth. This par parenthesis to the praise of His grace who gives us a lesson of his love to learn even the most unlikely spots. "Where sin abounds" (not simply exists) "grace much more."

2. Satan "cuts down"—God never. Here you have satan as in Job 1 and 2 chapters, trying to make our God do it. But in both places the work is cast back on himself. Compare "Lo he is in thine hand," of Job, with, "After that thou shalt cut it down," of Luke. Whom does satan want to cut down? Answer: Those planted in a fruitful place and yet failing in fruit bearing. Here he is always "hunting the precious life." Useless, inconsistent, habitually loose saints, live a long while. It is only the shining ones that go down like "wandering stars," shooting meteors that vanish in an instant. Compare the beginning of chapter 13, out of which the parable of the 3 years barren fig tree grew, to find how the men perishing while at worship, is but a common circumstance, daily seen in real life, "unless thou repent." We are not to think their case exceptional, and hence one in which there is little warning for us, but a case "as common as dirt" of privileges abused and opportunities wasted.

Then satan claims his rights, and the poor soul, whose time is up, disappears like lightning, it little matters whether by the "sword of Pilate" or the "falling tower of Siloam." Satan will select the method of exit that will most effectually do his work and at the same time, put survivors who are in danger, completely off their guard.

Our Jesus recalls us to the common peril in which all are, who hearing the call of the "God of glory" oft repeated, turn a deaf ear to it. "After that?"—?????

"Lord" in the 8th verse easily misleads, remember, it is in Greek simply an equivalent for "sir." And not even "Michael" ever treats satan other than courteously.

Only silly men bring "railing" words when speaking of him.

Our going up is not the signal for the immediate casting down of satan. For we go up between the 31 and 4th chapter and many stirring events happen between that and the 12th chapter. What I always meant to teach (but which I may not have put so clearly as I might have done) is this: that the going up of the "church of the 1st hour" is the "beginning of the end," and our presence with Jesus in the glory, renders it a thing no longer to be tolerated, that he, who has been our "accuser night and day before God and the Father," shall pollute the skies with his presence. As when a bride has been taken home, it is no longer meet that the discovered strander should remain in the house who had in every way, schemed and wrought to keep her away from the heart and home of her loving bridegroom. From the moment that the first installment of that glorified bride breathes the air of the heavenly "pines prepared for her, all the power and wisdom of our Jesus is concentrated on this design to rid "the heavens" of his accursed presence. When all is ripe and the mated forces on both sides arranged (for we must not suppose satan, the old campaigner, to be asleep, or careless about this tremendous issue) there occurs the struggle (that poor Milton verily supposed was in the past, but which is yet in the awful future) where "Michael and his angels" fight, and the "dragon and his angels" fight and the victory remains with our friend and champion Jesus. For Michael is none other than He, I feel assured. Only He can conquer him at every turn. "All judgment is committed to the Son." An angel would be a baby in the devil's grasp. They may fight "rangs," Michael fights the dragon.

Chapter xii then is the heavenly end of the beginning, which we read of in chapter IV when a "door in heaven is opened" and John saw the "church of the first born," through its opened portals, sitting on thrones with crowns of gold, and in intimate fellowship with HIM who occupies the central place of power and glory. And yet this is not the true "beginning of the end," but rather we go back to Calvary, from whose bloody cross sentence went forth against the "murderer from the beginning."

"PROSPECT POINT," LANDON, N. Y.—
Dated April 22, 1885.]

DEAR INTERIOR.—I was eight and twenty when I came to India the first time; I am fifty-eight to day. But save that the figures remind me that an average generation has passed between the two dates, I feel not a minute older than when I left Boston in the Annie Bucknam. And I trust the dear LORD so to "renew youth," according to promise, that I shall never feel old, but when the time comes for the transition to the true El Dorado of our God, where wrinkles are smoothed out and gray hairs are abolished and eternal youth and vigor begin, I may enter it with as young a feel as, by grace, I have to day. "Many happy returns, if Jesus tarries, Papa, but I hope He will be here, before the next one," Marie said, and my whole soul responded with my voice, "Amen."

Perhaps that is all I need say about this anniversary, and I should not mention it at all, but that it gives me an opportunity of saying how good the LORD is to me and mine. Praise His dear name forever.

The young folks have taken the servants in hand to teach them what English they will learn, and have a good deal of solid fun in doing it. Roars of laughter come from the girls room every morning when they are trying to shocking Hindostani to make the Ayah understand and she in worse English is returning the compliment. She is a nice little creature, the wife of the Mehter, and very ambitious to learn. Will's pupils are the Behra and Khidmatgar, of the sterner sex; who are equally zealous in attacking their primers under his tuition. But I may as well explain just here what "Ayah," "Behra" and "Khidmatgar" mean.

Know then, that in this land, one man does only one thing and therefore each item of housekeeping work means a separate person to do it. Your Behra carries water, nothing else. If you were to ask him to black your boots, he would as little think of doing it as would your Behra, (whose work is to apply the blacking brush) obey you if you ordered him to bring water from the well or river. "Hamara Kam nashin," (it is none of my business) is the only answer you would get, and that not impudence in the least, only the simple statement of a fact that precludes all controversy. It is not his work, according to the unbending custom of this country, and from that "dastur" (or custom) there is no appeal with him. The basis of the whole system of caste, is founded on the unchangeable nature of this dictum of "the fathers." As it was in the beginning, so it is now, and ever shall be. A Behra must carry water, to the end of time, and no nothing else. A Behra's son, when he gets big enough is also a Behra; and the son's son and so on to the latest generation. The badge of their employment is the goat skin, stripped off whole and tanned entire, with broad leather strap fastened where the legs of the animal had been and sling across the shoulders holding some ten gallons, I should judge at a guess. His associations are water carriers. He marries, if at all, a water carrier's daughter and expects to go where he dies to where good water carriers go. That there will be a spot in the future world, devoted especially to Behras, he never questions or doubts for a moment.

So it is with all the trades, professions and handicrafts in this land of caste distinction. I do not find one hair's breadth of change in this respect since I was here 30 years ago. Generations gliding by make no appreciable mark upon this heirloom of the past.

Of course this is inconvenient for housekeepers and makes the employment of many servants a simple necessity. It is not from indolence nor ostentation, nor easy compliance with the customs of the luxurians, that the bumble missionary's house swarms with servants, the number of whom amazes a dweller in England and America, when it is simply stated without expansion, and perhaps might lead some, even doubtfully disposed, to shake their heads, where self-denying precepts are linked with such apparently self pampering practice as a dozen servants to a moderate household. For the sake of tender consciences the thing should be fully explained.

—Mr. T. L. CROW, of Nicholasville, is at his father's on a visit. He was in to see us yesterday and expressed himself highly pleased with his new home.

—Prof. W. C. GRINSTEAD, of Centre College, with several of his pupils, attended the Commencement Tuesday night. Miss Ida Prewitt used to be a pupil of his and to hear her essay was the principal reason of his coming.

—MISS ELDREDGE left for her home in Memphis to night much to the regret of her many friends here. We hope her departure is not for eye, but that her bright face will again be seen here before many days have passed.

—MISS OLLIE V. WILLIAMS and Lizzie Sheahan, who have been attending college here, left Wednesday for their home in Nelson county. Miss Bertie Shreve returned to Lebanon the same day, Miss May Adams to Mt. Vernon Thursday and Miss Ida Prewitt to Boyle county yesterday.

—We had the pleasure this week of meeting Rev. Calleman Pope, of Augusta, Ga., who recently bought the Millersburg Female College. He appeared to be a most accomplished gentleman and judging from the handsome notices that appear in the Georgia papers concerning him, the future of the school is very bright.

—TO NIGHT Miss Addie Purnell will leave for her home at Nashville accompanied by her dear friend, Mrs. M. V. Timberlake, who will spend a couple of weeks with her. As members of the college faculty they have been residents of Stanford for several years and our people have become much attached to them. They have filled their respective positions with great credit and won for themselves the lasting good will of our people. Miss Purnell will be one of the faculty of Millersburg College next year and Mrs. Timberlake will likely return to her Virginia home to remain. But go where they will they will ever be pleasantly remembered here and if good wishes avail, their future lives will be as happy as we think they deserve to be.

A REPORT of the financial condition of the county together with a list of the causes against it appears in this issue. The bonded debt of the county is but $8,000 and it is being paid as fast as it falls due.

As Aiken & Bishop were taking their traction engine home yesterday it frightened a horse driven by Mr. R. T. Mattingly and it ran off throwing him and his wife and child out of the vehicle and injuring the two latter painfully though not seriously.

The Club requests that the persons who hold a mission tickets to the Hop to-night at the Opera House and who do not expect to dance, will please find seats in the gallery, which will be nicely cleaned and none but the best people admitted. This is done to prevent the great crowd on the floor to curtail the space for the dancers.

The Band Boys having received general contributions of cake, ice, substantials, &c., are prepared to guarantee an excellent supper at Eureka Hall to night. A lovely lot of young ladies have volunteered to act as waiters and with their cheering presence and the enlivening strains of Eichhorn's Orchestra, which will furnish music from 7 to 9:30 o'clock, the promise of a good time is sure to be fulfilled.

MARRIAGE.—Mr. Reinhold Fischer and Miss Hulda Scheiter, both fresh from Germany, will be married at Lutherheim church next Sunday by Rev. Otto Kuh.

THE supper given by the Ladies of the Christian Church was like every thing they attempt, a most successful affair, both in the abundance and excellence of the good things and in a pecuniary point of view, as we learn it netted them about $120. The tables were very handsomely dressed and the pretty girl waiters flitting to and fro made the whole a very pretty scene.

NATIONAL.—Nineteen Germans and two Swiss appeared before County Clerk Blain yesterday and filed their declaration of intention to become citizens. This is the preparatory step for naturalization papers and must be taken two years before said papers can issue. The law also requires a person to be in the country five years before they can issue.

CHAPTER IX.

LEDF ASTRAY.

No further demonstration on the part of the seniors that day and Henry began to hope they had reconsidered their intentions. "It would teach them a lesson for some of them to get their heads soundly pummeled and one of which they stand in need, but I don't want to teach it." But his spirit rose in arms when he saw them walk off and leave Mr. Krupp severely alone. Poor Mr. Krupp, who couldn't hide his mortification and distress and pretended to be too deeply interested in his studies to take any recreation at all. He had been a universal favorite among them up until this time and their conduct wounded far more than it angered him.

Sometimes our morals are mighty like our gloves; the right side looks best, but they'll do turn; a little looseness doesn't matter; elasticity preferred. These boys would have felt infinite score for one who hadn't bravery enough to tell the truth, no matter what the consequence, but one whose moral courage was sufficient to keep him from fighting when there was no wrong to fight over, involved his physical courage and he was thereby disgraced.

Ancient history tells of nothing gained by diplomacy or civil warfare; everything was decided by the sword and battle axe; and although civilization has made such strides, it seems that the time has not yet ended out and never will, it crops up in various ways and goes far to substantiate the Darwinian theory of a remorse tiger and wildcat ancestry. Man's dignity above all things must not be insulted; do whatever else you like, but leave around him a clear space in which his high personal esteem may flourish as the bay tree and give income to his nostrils.

The dignity of Baxter & Chattal's senior class had been insulted. Young men with wings fully fledged with due thoughts, with which to soar above reason, fancy or nature; young men who could verbiage like like and Blackstone and add a little to them; who could recite with the eloquence of Cicero's self, Virgil, Tacitus and anything else in order; young men on whom the ladies raved and the public gazed; one of these bad been struck in the face by a boy who wore plain clothes, smoked no costly cigars and in other ways showed himself to be a nobody! Had the like ever been heard of? and this blow had been weekly taken, the recipient even said it was deserved, the unmanly one! One more he would best the cinder until he roared like a lion, "cried like a baby," corrected another. Each swore some particular vengeance and ended by dispatching one of them, rather to notify Henry of their kind feelings and intentions.

He was at his desk writing out a task given him by Mr. Cattal when the senior approached him. Although Mr. Ghadley looked very bad he saw no signs of fear. Henry's face didn't turn pale, neither did his hand tremble as he quietly continued to write.

"Very well," he said, "I'll be ready, tell them."

Mr. Ghadley hesitated a moment as if he expected something more, but as Henry seemed to have forgotten him, he started off, looked back when half way to the door, another time when at it, but Henry did not look up or stop his work, and when the door closed it out: a very a-torished face. "Whew, but he's a cool one" said Mr. Ghadley, "one would think his heir to an Erdum or had taken a bath in the Styx heel and all. That Graham is a stunner; there won't be any child's play if he's whipped."

"How did he look?" inquired the others.

"Bad," said Mr. Ghadley, "terribly frightened, looked this way" — assuming a most doleful and ludicrous expression — the bare remembrance of which sufficed to throw Mr. Ghadley into such a violent fit of laughter, that the others became alarmed and proceeded to beat him soundly in the back until he was sufficiently sobered to relate with much facial expression Henry's extreme horror, causing the seniors much amusement.

The time appointed by them was 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a grove just outside and back of the college grounds. There had been decided that Henry was to be made acquainted with the weight of a senior's fist and inspired with a sense of their dignity. Henry acquiesced. Mr. Krupp with the time and after school they started out together.

Mr. Krupp was very silent and although Henry laughed and talked on various subjects he said not a word except occasionally, "You're a brick Graham, a jolly fellow." No allusion was made to the object which brought them out until just as they reached the grove Mr. Krupp said in a determined voice.

"They shant hurt you, Graham, without hurting me much worse. It is a mean, contemptible thing to force you into. I'll see that you're not imposed on."

The seniors were already there, some stretched on the grass, others walking about, all talking and laughing in the best of humor, especially Mr. Ghadley. Henry touched his hat pleasantly and told them that he was at their service.

"You understand young man what is required of you?" said one who came forward and acted as spokesman, "you've insulted the senior class of Baxter & Chattal; this can only be wiped out by whipping one or more of us, or getting whipped, which is more likely, or making an apology which will be dictated to you by our class; you can now decide."

"I have already decided," said Henry, "which one of you am I to fight?"

One of them came forward, one who would be called a burly fellow, if the term was not too coarse to apply to one of the students. Laying off his coat and cuffs he stepped up to Henry and hit him a heavy blow on the shoulder. He staggered slightly, regained his footing and dexterously avoided another blow, struck his antagonist between the eyes which caused him to measure length on the ground.

"Will that do?" said Henry, when after vigorous rubbing and pounding they had succeeded in bringing their companion around. "Will that do or shall we try it again?"

One little fellow, who had more spirit than strength, now came forward, but was quickly on the turf with his opponent sitting on him and holding him there. The scene was an entirely different one from what the seniors had expected; two of them the best in the lot, had been signally defeated; Mr. Krupp was on the side of the enemy and if Mr. Ghadley wasn't he was more amused than disconcerted by the turn of affairs, while Henry looked as fresh as ever. It began to dawn on the other seven that a compromise had better been made; their fun was at an end; they didn't want the affair to be anything very serious, the best way was to treat the whole thing as a joke, so they all laughed and shook hands with Henry; said he was a fine fellow and might consider himself one of them in the future, that they were only bent on a little fun. Young Ghadley laughed so much and wrung Henry's hand so heartily that he was universally frowned on, as for Mr. Krupp, he was so entirely taken in and delighted that he could say not a word.

"You must come to the East room tonight, Graham, we are to have wine and cigars and can't do without you," said a chorus of voices.

"I neither drink or smoke, so you must excuse me," said Henry smiling, "I would be one too many, like Banquo's ghost, and spoil the feast."

"But we'll have cake and lemonade also, you don't object to lemonade do you? and you can talk if you don't smoke, come, be sociable."

So Henry decided to go and did go; the lemonade was what the boys called "spiked," the wine was so very tempting, the tobacco smells so very nice, and — well, Henry was so very young, that when he went to his room that night he did no better than Mr. Krupp and Mr. Ghadley, and while they felt along the floor and wall for the door knob, he accidentally found it, bade them a most affectionate good night and went to bed with his books on.

That Dirty Dandruff. Dandruff is dirty and disagreeable in every way. It soils the clothing continually and is accompanied by a hardly less annoying sensation of itching. The scalp is disheveled. There is nothing in the world so thoroughly adapted to this trouble as Parker's Hair Balsam. It cleanses and heals the scalp, stops the falling hair and restores its original softness, gloss and color. Is not only, highly perfumed, an elegant dressing. Very economical, a only a small occasional application keeps the hair in perfect condition.

THIS IDEA OF GOING WEST for Colorado or New Mexico, for pure air to relieve Consumption, is all a mistake. Any reasonable man would use Dr. Bonaventura's Cough and Lung Syrup for Consumption in all its first stages. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Pills yield a tonic to the application of Dr. Bonaventura's Pill Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense Itching and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address the Dr. Bonaventura Medicina Co., Piqua, Ohio. Sold by McAllister & Stage.
